	Total Score (15-75)	How much fusion to thoughts?
ATQ-B	39	Moderate

Scoring and Interpretation Information

The respondent is asked to rate how much he/she BELIEVED a given thought when they had it on a 5-point scale (1 = Not at all, to 5 = Totally). Scores are summed across the 15 items to form an ATQ-B index ranging from 15 to 75. A higher score indicates a higher level of cognitive fusion with depressive thoughts.

A descriptor is provided to give an overall indication of how 'fused' the client is to these thoughts. This descriptor is determined by the average response to the questions.

ATQ-B scores can be used to track progress in therapy over time. Successful therapy should see ATQ-B scores reduce over time, reflecting a reduction in fusion.

Based on ACT theory, a client's ability to distance themselves from depressive thoughts would decrease the control exerted by these thoughts and result in a reduction of depression symptomatology.

Note that the ATQ-B does not measure the frequency of unhelpful thoughts, but rather the extent to which unhelpful thoughts are believed.
